IRON, Still Reeling From Loss of Bureau 12, Preparing New Expedition

Just months after the regrettable loss of all (now-designated) Bureau 12a on-world personnel, orders have come down for IRON to recruit a replacement team for a new colony seed project. Details are sparse on the target world, but based on the source, a military log from three centuries past, planners are optimistic for a high resource yield. Inquiry managed to secure a redacted copy of this ancient record in its entirety.

"Locus [REDACTED]; Opes RF; Agaricum, Probo."

Contact was lost at some point during the Second Unification, a common fate for small outposts during that time. Danger expectation is low; a good colony for new recruits!

Inquiry Intrepid June 15, 516 2B

Jack Feinnes